93rd YEAR

GETTYSBURG, PA., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7, 1911

NO. 42

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT

BACCALAUREATE BY REV. JEREMIAH ZIMMERMAN, LL. D.

Rev. A. E. Wagner, D. D., of Altoona, Addressed the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday Evening.

The first commencement under the administration of the new president, Dr. W. A. Granville, in the 79th year of the existence of Gettysburg College, began on Sunday morning in College Church auspiciously. The day was beautiful and the church was crowded with a large audience, a number of alumni having returned to be present at this first commencement of the new order of things which means so much for the Greater Gettysburg.

The Senior class were led into the church by the faculty in their robes, which it was recently decided should be used on all ceremonial occasions. The Senior class were garbed in gown and mortar board.

The service was opened by anthem by choir, "Hark, Hark My Soul." Dr. Granville read the Scripture lesson and prayer was offered by Dean P. M. Bickie. Miss Ruth Clutz sang a solo, "With Verdure Clad."

Dr. Granville introduced Dr. Jeremiah Zimmerman, of Syracuse, N. Y., whom his Alma Mater had been delighted to honor with the degree of LL.D.

Baccalaureate.

Dr. Zimmerman, taking for his text for the baccalaureate sermon, "What Think Ye of the Christ," among other things said, Man is a thinking being and this is a thinking age with achievements far beyond what has been dreamed of. A well-trained mind is the goal of the educational problem, so as to give an intellectual producer and a moral force. The man who gets the least out of this world is the indolent, the selfish and the miser. I am profoundly interested in students because of their position to give direction to the destinies of the nation and Christian education is the hope of America.

The moral tone must not be divorced from intellectual activity. No man or woman ever failed who did the right. The supremacy of conscience is apparent in the world to-day. Merit can not be bought in the market place. Every thinking man has a creed and when a man says, "I think" he has a creed and as a man thinks within himself so is he. Thought rules the world and has made the world in every clime.

Christ has been transforming people for ages and God has come into the world through Jesus Christ, who was different from all other beings in being more effective in his death than in his life. The religious idea is the one that has moved mankind to more achievement than any other and this thought was illustrated by the speaker in closing by telling of three pictures at a foreign exhibition that attracted more attention than all other pictures. The three were on the religious theme with Christ as the central figure and crowds would be seen all the time around these pictures when other pictures attracted but few. The one attracting the most attention was a soldier dead at the cross with words underneath, "Died for His Country," and on the cross was the Christ with words overhead, "Died for Mankind."

Y. M. C. A. Address.

The Y. M. C. A. Meeting was held in College Church on Sunday evening and the usual service was supplemented by the Y. M. C. A. chorus.

Rev. A. E. Wagner, D.D., of Altoona, who would not permit the use of his name for the presidency of the college a year ago, delivered a vigorous and brilliant address on the text, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have I give unto thee," and declared that the men who have done the most for the uplifting of the world have been the poor and not the rich. They were not great because of their poverty nor in spite of it but because they gave themselves to their message. There is a potency in public sentiment which sooner or later will speak out.

Dr. John Watson named the six greatest men in history as Homer, Socrates, Columbus, Copernicus, Luther, and Moses. Their names will never be blotted from the pages of history. They are citizens of the world and all children of poverty. They were great because of their purpose. John Brown the plebeian and Wendell Phillips, the patrician, were equally great in giving their best to an enslaved race. The real success of existence depends upon the co-operation of the human with the divine. To be successful you must be in harmony with the divine. Eliminating all that has been inspired by religion in literature, painting, sculpture, architecture and music, and what is left is not the best. The key of religion has opened the lock to the consciousness of power of doing the best.

Commencement Concert.

On Monday evening the combined musical clubs with the college orchestra presented most acceptably in Brua Chapel the following program, many numbers being enthusiastically encored: Vocal March, "Away, Away," Brackett, Glee Club; Greater Gettysburg, Moyer, Mandolin Club; Reading, Selected, Mr. Ott; Selection, Mikado, Sullivan-Tobani, Orchestra; Mandocella Solo, "An Matin," Godard, Mr. Moyer; Medley Popular Airs, Arranged by Moyer, Mandolin Club; Vision Fugitive, Massenet, Mr. Lewars; De Sandman, D. Protheroe, Glee Club; Marche Militaire, F. Schubert, Orchestra; My Hero-Chocolate Soldier, Mandocella Club; "The Goblins," Parks, Glee Club; American Patrol, F. W. Meacham, Orchestra; "Sons of Gettysburg," from "Men of Harlech," Combined Glee and Mandolin Clubs.

Junior Oratorical Contest.

Tuesday morning at 10.30 the Junior Oratorical Contest for the Reddig prize took place in Brua Chapel. The speakers and their subjects were: "The Call of the Century," J. Gould Wickey, Littlestown. "Ideals of Peace," Orville M. Ott, Gettysburg. "Duty a Privilege," Walter D. Spangler, Gettysburg. "Sacrifice a Means," Earl S. Rudisill, Littlestown. "Power and its Sources," Charles D. Fausold, Latrobe. "The Great Man in History," Elmer W. Harner, Littlestown. The College Orchestra furnished the music.

Class Day Exercises.

The unseasonable weather resulted in the Class Day exercises being held in Brua Chapel on Tuesday afternoon. The master of ceremonies was C. J. Small. The class roll and prophecy was by E. J. Bowman, C. M. Davis and R. J. Miller. The class poem was read by N. D. Swank. The class history was narrated by P. B. S. Rice. The mantle oration was delivered by the president of the class, C. M. Allabach, and the Junior response was by C. E. Liebegott. The College Orchestra furnished the music for the event.

The commencement exercises take place in Brua Chapel, this Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, and will be followed by the alumni collation in Examination Hall.

SPROUL ROAD BILL SIGNED.

Expectations Good That Road to Gettysburg will be Among First.

The Sproul Road Bill was signed by Governor Tener last week and at the same time the Governor announced the appointment of E. M. Bigelow, former Director of Public Works of Pittsburgh, as the commissioner of the new Highway Department. Mr. Bigelow has a reputation of being one of the ablest engineers in the State and it is believed that he will establish the department upon a highly efficient basis.

Gettysburg unquestionably is a highly favored point under the state road system created by the Sproul bill, having more roads radiating from the county seat than York or Lancaster.

The seven roads entering Gettysburg will be the York pike, Bonneauville road, Littlestown pike, the Hagerstown road, the Chambersburg turnpike, the Carlisle or Bendersville road and the Harrisburg road. These roads will be built at the entire expense of the State, as part of the system connecting county seats and important roads connecting in adjoining states. $3,000,000 has been appropriated for the building of these state roads and should the proposed constitutional amendment for borrowing $50,000,000 for roads be adopted two years hence this money can be had for more rapid work as needed. If not the program can be carried out by biennial appropriations.

The "Harrisburg Telegraph" in an issue of last week is responsible for the statement that it is understood that not much time will be lost toward bettering roads reaching Harrisburg and extending to Gettysburg. It is recognized that Gettysburg will attract people from every State and with fine roads to Harrisburg, they will naturally want to come to see the capitol.

Gettysburg will rejoice if this statement shall materialize and there are irrefutable reasons why an extension to Gettysburg should be among the first roads to be built. Gettysburg has fifty miles of as good roads on the battlefield as can be found anywhere but without a single good road from the outside and the building of the roads here would make Gettysburg more accessible to thousands of people. It would be most appropriate and fitting that the roads to the Shrine of American Patriotism be first built and it is to be hoped that there will be fine highways here in 1913 to help the nation celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg.

College Publications.

The "1912 Spectrum" was issued last week and is one of the handsomest "Spectrums" that has been put out. It has been printed on India tinted paper in brown tones and covered with limp brown leather. The many features of this important year of the college were caught by photograph and are preserved in the book. Everyone interested in Gettysburg College should have the "1912 Spectrum."

The second number of the "College Bulletin" has just come from the Compiler press and contains the list of students of the year, showing a total attendance in the collegiate and preparatory departments of 323 students.

Wins Prize.

Miss Jane F. Shields, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Shields, returned home on Monday evening with honor for her work at the Philadelphia School of Applied Arts. The graduating class gave two prizes to the members of other classes for quality and quantity of work and Miss Shields was awarded one of these prizes.

Burglar Enters Home.

A burglar entered the home of U. G. Pheasant, Baltimore street one night last week and stole a silver service, a stick pin, a pair of glasses and a pair of new shoes. All the doors were opened so as to make flight easy.

Gettysburg's Mail Business.

With the last day of May the post-office closed the laborious work of counting the pieces of mail received and dispatched. The work began with the first day of the month under orders from the postmaster general. May is usually a dull month for this place and there was only one day when there was a heavy mail yet the total for the month was nearly a quarter million pieces of mail matter handled or to be exact 228,000, and considering the fact that many months of the year would be much heavier, there would be no question that the total for the year would be over three million pieces handled.

During the month 64,650 pieces of first class matter were received, 38,000 being delivered by town carriers, the remainder by rural carriers. There were 76,600 pieces of outgoing first-class mail. Newspapers coming in totaled 30,240 and outgoing 23,300. In the latter class were included bundles of many papers which counted only as one piece. Of the incoming newspapers about one-third were carried by city carriers.

Of the 2250 magazines received all but about 250 were delivered by town carriers and this mail matter is largely responsible for their heavy packs of mail. The number of outgoing magazines was 107. Regular publications sent with stamps were 780 incoming and 70 outgoing.

Circulars entering the postoffice numbered 12,600 while 3,600 were dispatched; other incoming third-class matter 7,300, outgoing 2,300.

Incoming fourth class 1,900; outgoing 2,363.

Congressional franked matter: incoming letters 99, other matter 128; outgoing 14 letters, 28 pieces of other matter. Other franked matter including departmental, incoming letters 690 other matter 683; outgoing letters 645, other matter 518.

There were received 116 foreign letters and 73 pieces of other foreign matter. Dispatched foreign matter, 156 letters, 64 pieces of other matter. There were received 249 registered letters and 240 dispatched.

In addition to counting all the mail every person was timed. Incoming mail was handled between five and six pieces per minute and outgoing between six and seven pieces a minute.

Smallpox at Cold Springs.

Two cases of smallpox are reported in the family of Harrison Wagaman at Cold Springs in Hamiltonian township. Dr. Johnston of White Pine Camp discovered the cases. When Dr. Johnston visited the Wagaman home he was at first denied admission but insisting he entered and found four members of the family in bed with the disease. He quarantined the house. The cases were traced to direct contact with the cases at Pondback in Franklin county. Four members of the State Constabulary have been sent into the Franklin and Adams infected region to patrol the country and enforce the established quarantine. One of the police has been assigned to duty in Hamiltonian township. The state authorities propose to leave nothing undone to stamp out the contagion.

Boy Scouts on Hike.

About thirty of Gettysburg's Boy Scouts leave this Wednesday morning on a four days' hike to Washington. The boys will be in charge of Rev. J. B. Baker, pastor of St. James Lutheran Church, and an audience has been arranged for them with President Taft on next Wednesday, June 14. They will present to the President a genuine Gettysburg Battlefield relic. The Scouts leave Gettysburg at 4 o'clock in the morning. The first day's hike will be to Thurmont, a distance of 18 miles; the second to Frederick, 16 miles; the third to Gaithersburg, 23 miles; and the fourth to Washington, 20 miles. They expect to arrive in Washington Saturday, the 10th.

Practically all the hiking will be done early in the morning or the cool of the evening. Each morning the haversacks will be fired and the eating will all be done out of doors. Arrangements are being made for the Scouts to sleep either in lodge halls or churches during the trip so that they will not be inconvenienced by inclement weather.

Collision of Vehicles.

A collision between a buggy and a heavy Dayton wagon took place on the new state road through Brushtown on a recent evening. The occupants of the teams were Charles Shultz, Miss Wentz and Miss Louise Billman of New Oxford, in the buggy, and a Mr. Krichen and several ladies in a two-horse Dayton. It was rather dark and neither driver observed the approach of the team coming in the opposite direction. When the crash came the light buggy was completely wrecked, and all the occupants were thrown to the road, Miss Billman and Mr. Shultz escaping injury, though the clothing of the former was torn in a number of places, in an effort to extricate herself from the wrecked buggy. Miss Wentz was more unfortunate, having her right arm dislocated at the wrist and the elbow sprained with lacerations of face and neck. The horse escaped injury. The other party escaped without injury and there was no damage to the vehicle. Mr. Krichen, who lived nearby, rendered every assistance and gave Mr. Shultz a buggy with which to return home.

Why He Does It.

"It isn't often that I have faith enough in the medicine put up by other people to be willing to offer to refund the money if it does not cure," said L. M. Buehler to a Compiler man who dropped into his store, "but I am glad to sell Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia on that basis."

"The Dr. Howard Company in order to get a quick introductory sale, authorizes me to sell their regular fifty cent bottles at half-price, 25 cents, and, although I have sold a lot of it, and have guaranteed every package, not one has been brought back as unsatisfactory."

"I am still selling the specific at half-price, although I cannot tell how long I shall be able to do so, and anyone who is subject to constipation, sick headache, dizziness, liver trouble, indigestion or a general played out condition, ought to take advantage of this chance. You can tell your readers that if they are not satisfied with the specific that they can come right back to my store and I will cheerfully refund their money."

THE JUNE MAGAZINES

A PENNSYLVANIA FARMER LIVES WELL FROM 3 ACRES

What the Panama Canal Will Mean to United States—Playing Big Brother to a Continent.

Living Well on Three Acres.

There are few people who are able to make a good living from so small an amount of land as is Mr. Oliver R. Shearer, who lives at Hyde Park, a suburb of Reading, Pa. Mr. Shearer is two and one-half miles from the heart of the city, and raises vegetables and poultry. His farm consists of a trifle over three acres, but there are only about two and one-half acres that are under actual cultivation. A little mountain stream runs one corner of the place to pieces so badly that it cannot be cultivated.

The little farm produces about 10,000 heads of celery, 300 to 500 tomato plants, and anywhere from 3,000 to 7,000 each of lettuce, endive and beets. From five to ten bushels of onion sets are usually planted each year and yield a bountiful crop. "Suburban Life" for June.

Our Dependence Upon Panama Canal

The maintenance of the Panama canal in effective operation is one of the large elements in the future development of sea power in the Pacific. No other nation has in the canal the same interest of self-preservation that the United States has. Not only is this true as regards the Panama canal, but no similar condition of dependence upon a canal exists anywhere else to near the same degree. The closest parallel is Suez, as compared with the Cape of Good Hope. Suez offers Great Britain an inside route to her great Australian colonies, as well as to India, but the existence of the British empire does not depend upon that route as vitally as the ability of our thickly settled Atlantic coast to come to the aid of the Pacific depends upon Panama, as compared with Magellan. This necessity is so urgent as to make the canal, as before said, essentially a part of the coast line of the United States. From Rear-Admiral A. T. Mahan's "The Panama Canal and Sea Power in the Pacific" in the June "Century."

Playing Big Brother to a Continent.

Playing Big Brother to American republics has its difficulties. Peace-makers are blessed, but their motives are often misinterpreted. Sometimes, too, they get mixed in other people's affairs. Take our own case. We undertook to help Cuba, got into a war with Spain and emerged with Filipinos and anti-imperialists on our hands. We tried to help various Central American republics preserve their right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and find ourselves hated by the revolutionists we crushed and to be investigated by the revolutionists we helped.

Now we are doing it all over again with Mexico. Our Big Brothering, however, has one singularity. We seem more eager to protect, pacify and admonish our neighbors than to trade with them. We are ready to fight for the Monroe Doctrine, but we let Europe furnish the capital, merchandise and transportation for the republics facing the Atlantic, and rather look to Japan to court those facing the Pacific. We have talked about the Big Stick. We have practiced being Big Brother. Now let us be Big Customer and Seller.—Editorial in "The World to-Day," for June.

Collector's Itch.

Collector's itch is a pretty serious ailment, especially when it is contracted late in life. In my fourteenth year I drove into my father's yard with an acquisition on the carriage seat beside me (it was a dilapidated mahogany table), and immediately I was put to bed. Since that day I have collected canes, ship models, whaling implements, scrimshaw, costumes, open-hearth cooking utensils—but antique furniture has remained my particular hobby. And so it happened, two years ago, I yielded to the greatest temptation of my life and in a short while found myself possessed of some one thousand pieces of antique mahogany furniture: consisting in part of some two hundred and fifty tables, as many chairs, and sufficient high-post bedsteads, had I elected to sleep one night in each, to have taken me four solid months to do the round. The climax of this extravagance was a three days' auction sale, when was sold all I did not reserve for myself. Now some people might have been cured by such an experience; but two days later I encountered, on a suburban trolley, a man with a chair. Its arms were not original, the legs had been sawed off and rockers added, but for the sake of its shield back I purchased the chair ere we passed the second milestone and carried it home under my arm. The Man Who Condemned the House Fly to Death.

Kansas started war on the common house fly and the battle has been taken up by nearly every state in the Union. Ol' Doc Crumline, as he is known in the West, started the hostilities. Crumline was made secretary of the Kansas State Board of Health several years ago and at once started to send out bulletins. He much-raked the house fly and did it so well that the whole is Better than all Others for these very Pertinent Reasons:

Most Comfortable bed ever slept on—soft, yielding, but springy and resilient—never packs or gets lumpy, or loses its feeling of newness. That is because it is made of Ostermoor sheets; built, not stuffed. We have scores of letters from doctors and competent judges who declare it the only

Absolutely sanitary mattress because dust cannot work into it; no vermin can harbor in it; a sun-bath is all the renovating it ever needs; it will not absorb dampness, disease germs, or any poison from perspiration or the atmosphere. It is always

Perfectly Dry because non-absorbent. If the ticking is dry, the mattress is dry. No taking cold from it, no unpleasant or musty odor about it; always fresh and sweet. Testimonials in our free book bear witness for those who have used it for thirty years or more and who do not hesitate to say that it Lasts a Life-time and stays in perfect condition. It never needs remaking or renovating. You may remove and clean the tick as often as you like.

No other mattress in the world, of any material, at any price, from any maker or through any dealer, can truthfully make and prove all the claims as can the Ostermoor. Do not take our word for it—our word is good—but if you will commonwealth fell upon these little pests with a viciousness that knew no mercy.

"Crumline realized that the common house fly was a distributor of innumerable filth and loathsome disease germs in its movements from garbage piles, cesspools and stables to sick rooms," writes F. D. Coburn in the June number of "The American Magazine," and exposed food supplies, and proceeded to inaugurate his famous 'Swat the Fly' campaign in which everybody has joined until in Kansas the fly, like the dispenser of strong drink, is an outlaw and a fugitive.

"What is here related of this quiet, soft-spoken man is indicative of the wholesome service a capable, conscientious official can render if he has his cause at heart. Such is this unpretentious, modest, tireless, intelligent Secretary Crumline, who in his lines has pushed his state forward a hundred years in half a decade."

The Campers Camp-Cook Kit.

To be sure, one may go with a tin cup and a jackknife, but that is ultra-refinement and unnecessary on the score of weight. On the side of comfort it is not to be considered. There is a middle ground, where the cooking outfit will consist of a small, light frying pan, about six inches in diameter, a small mixing pan of about six inches diameter, another pan for a kettle, to nest into the mixing pan, a large tin cup, made to order, five inches in diameter and two and one half inches high, nesting into the pans, and a plate knife, fork, and desert spoon. All of these may be picked up at any hardware store, at a cost, including the specially made cup, of not much over a dollar. "The June 'Outing'."

Wall Street.

Wall Street three quarters of a century ago was the street of the merchants. It still is. The gamblers and the jugglers come and make their stir, and go; in a week they are forgotten. No place on earth appears to be more shifting or more transitory; no place is really more permanent. In half a dozen silent counting rooms sit the same old merchant firms and institutions that have held the power since the beginning; the Jews, spick and span and polished, in their ornate offices; the Yankees, direct, matter-of-fact, rather careless in their dress, in the same dark old frescoed rooms where they started forty years ago and more. These are the men who year by year, through a sure, continuous growth, have come to control in a larger measure the corporate capital of the nation. From "Masters of Capital in America," by John Moody and George Kibbe Turner, in "McClure's Magazine" for June.

The Puzzle King is Dead.

Sam Loyd, Jr., has been chosen puzzle editor of the "Woman's Home Companion" in place of his father, Sam Loyd the elder. The son inherits his father's genius for puzzle-making, and possesses remarkable originality. Sam Loyd the elder was known all over the world as the "Puzzle King." He was a clever artist, an inventor, a writer, a renowned chess-player and a profound mathematician. Among his most famous puzzles are the "Fifteen Puzzle," "Pigs in Clover," "How Old is Ann?" and "The Disappearing Chinaman," of which last it is said that more than one billion copies were sold. At the time of his death Mr. Loyd was seventy years old. June "Home Companion."

A VISITOR TO GETTYSBURG

TELLS OF THE IMPRESSIONS UP- PERMOST IN GOING OVER FIELD

And of the Message Every Visitor to Gettysburg Will Carry Away—The Many "Ifs" that Confront One.

BY STEPHEN J. HERDEN, EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK HERALD.

For many years—ever since the days when a boy in school I began to read the thrilling story of the Civil War—I have desired to visit the battlefield at Gettysburg. Many times I have put this particular item into my schedule. Again and again as I have itinerated back and forth across the land the hope has been cherished that the long-anticipated visit might become a reality. But the hope has had to be deferred.

Last March, however, I found myself in Baltimore with a day or two to spare between engagements. And Baltimore is only seventy-five miles from Gettysburg! Of course here was my chance—and I seized it eagerly enough.

The day was ideal for the purpose, and the guide employed for the tour—Captain James T. Long—rendered service of a highly satisfactory character. It happened that there were only a few other visitors upon the battle field that day, which was likewise an advantage. Familiarity with the details of the battlefield and the story of those three days of awful carnage had been secured from extensive reading of the literature of the battle from Federal and Confederate sources. A lecture on the famous battle which I heard Dr. Jesse Bowman Young—who fought in a Pennsylvania regiment at Gettysburg—deliver some years ago, gave me a clear idea of the topography of the battleground as well as of the character of the operations of those three terrible July days of 1863. So the tour was not quite a visitation of unfamiliar scenes.

The battle of Gettysburg has been described so often, and so complete has been the discussion of every phase of the historic encounter, that a considerable body of literature has been created about it. To attempt here to review the three days' struggle, or to go into any description of the field as it was at the time of the fight, or as it is now after the lapse of nearly half a century, would be a matter of questionable propriety. Perhaps the best thing to do, and perchance the only thing to do, is to record some of the impressions that surge upon the mind as one goes about that vast, peaceful field and meditates upon the conflict that raged so furiously upon it so many years ago.

Three great names are constantly in your mind as you make the tour of this field of conflict: Meade and Lee, and then high above both, Lincoln

The glory of the first lies in the wonderful victory achieved by the heroes in blue whom he led: the glory of the other abides in the fact that he carried his flag beyond the confines of the Southland and led as brave an army as ever followed a flag into battle. The glory of the greatest of the three will never fade, but increase in splendor as the years are unrolled from the scroll of the eternities. And around these three names many others cluster: Reynolds, Howard, Hancock, Sickles, Sedgwick, Warren, Schurz, Pleasonton, Kilpatrick—and a host beside who wore the blue; and Longstreet, Pickett, Hood, Ewell, Hill, Early, Gordon, Stuart—and another host who wore the gray.

That was near half a century ago—and how few of these men, of rank or of file, who struggled with each other in the grip of death, are on this side of the river to-day! Nearly all of that vast host that stood in battle array during three terrible days and came safely out of the jaws of death, have joined their comrades of the blue and the gray who died on the field of battle and for them—

"The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo."

But their deeds are imperishable. President Lincoln spoke too modestly of himself, albeit in full sincerity, when he said in his immortal Gettysburg address that "the world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here." Neither the deeds of the men of the North or of the South, nor the simple words uttered by the great President at the dedication of the national cemetery on the battlefield, will ever be forgotten.

If—That was the word I found coming up again and again as I went over the vast battle ground that day. If this and not that had happened. If this blunder had not been committed. If such and such tactics had been employed. If this advantage had been followed up. What a different story would the historians have written of the battle—and of the life of the nation from those three eventful July days of 1863.

Five years after the terrible and decisive battle, Lee wrote to Major McDonald of Virginia, who was projecting a school history, this: "As to the battle of Gettysburg, I must again refer you to the official accounts. Its loss was occasioned by a combination of circumstances. It was commenced in the absence of correct intelligence. It was continued in the effort to overcome the difficulties by which we were surrounded, and it would have been gained could one determined and united blow have been delivered by our whole line. As it was, victory trembled in the balance for three days, and the battle resulted in the infliction of as great an amount of injury as was received and in frustrating the Federal campaign for the season." If—

Forty years after the battle, General John B. Gordon of Georgia, who commanded a brigade at Gettysburg, brought out his very interesting book, "Reminiscences of the Civil War." In the chapter in which he discusses the famous battle you are confronted by another "if." It was the first day at Gettysburg. He swung into the fight with his six Georgia regiments. They fought terrifically. The Federal forces were driven back, with Gordon in hot and furious pursuit. An order came to halt. Gordon kept on. Again it came. But he still kept on. A third time, but still he fought. The fourth order from Lee was "of the most peremptory character," and was obeyed. Now, Gordon says: "From the situation plainly to be seen on the first afternoon, and from facts that afterward came to light as to the position of the different corps of General Meade's army, it seems certain that if the Confederates had simply moved forward, following up the advantages gained and striking the separated Union commands in succession, the victory would have been Lee's instead of Meade's." Again, if—

And when one comes to study the history of the second day, another big "if" stares him in the face. Longstreet had received orders from Lee to begin the fighting at sunrise. But he "delayed the attack until four o'clock in the afternoon, and lost his opportunity of occupying Little Round Top, the key to the position, which he might have done in the morning without firing a shot or losing a man." Lee ordered Longstreet "to attack at daybreak" on the third day; but "he did not attack until two or three o'clock in the afternoon." This rank disobedience of Longstreet's—which his comrades of the gray never forgave—must have been galling to the considerate and patient Lee. No wonder he said one day, long after Appomattox: "If I had had Stonewall Jackson at Gettysburg I would have won that fight, and a complete victory there would have given us Washington and Baltimore, if not Philadelphia, and would have established the independence of the Confederacy." And, again, "if"—

As one comes away from the field of battle another "if" lies across his pathway. If Meade had pursued Lee to the Potomac. If—And why did he not? Apparently every advantage was his. The river was swollen so that the army of the gray could not cross, but was compelled to wait until the waters fell and bridges could be constructed.

Why did Meade miss his chance to end the cruel war then and there, and save the nation the horrors of two more years of agony and woe? Why?

How the heart of the burdened Lincoln must have been wrung for very anguish when he learned that the retreating men in gray were not being pursued by the men in blue. On July 13 Lee crossed the Potomac—ten days after the battle.

CONSUMPTION

In the cure of consumption, concentrated, easily digested nourishment is necessary. For 35 years

Scott's Emulsion has been the standard, world-wide treatment for consumption. All Druggists

And Lincoln in the bitterness of his disappointment wrote a very severe letter in criticism of Meade in which he said: "I do not believe you appreciate the magnitude of the misfortune involved in Lee's escape. He was within your easy grasp, and to have closed upon him would, in connection with our other late successes, have ended the war. As it is, the war will be prolonged indefinitely. Your golden opportunity is gone, and I am distressed immeasurably because of it." But, with a heart overflowing with forgiveness, the great President never signed nor sent the letter. But "if"—

And yet, who will say that there was not an overruling power ordering the ways of men at this critical time; for God does indeed move "in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform."

General Lee, who was a man of acknowledged religious faith and life, evidently found an answer to all his questionings concerning the outcome of the battle in the unerring wisdom of the God of battles. The day before his army recrossed the Potomac—July 12—he wrote to his wife: "Had not the river unexpectedly risen, all would have been well with us. But God, in his all-wise providence, willed otherwise. I trust that a merciful God, our only hope and refuge, will not desert us in our hour of need and will deliver us by his almighty hand. We must, however, submit to his almighty will, whatever that may be." And there can be no doubt but that the tall, gaunt, clear visioned, stout-hearted, God-fearing Lincoln, staggering under the increasingly heavy burden, was likewise sustained by this unfaltering faith.

There are many points of special interest on the battlefield: the Peach Orchard, Devil's Den, the Wheatfield, Round Top and Little Round Top, Culp's Hill, Spangler's Spring, the High Water Mark, and the Bloody Angle where Pickett's brilliant but ineffective charge came to its terrific climax. It would be a satisfaction to speak at length of these points of special interest; but there is not space for that here.

Nearly five decades ago that great and dreadful conflict raged over these now peaceful fields and hills. Nearly all who bore arms that day—the blue and the gray—are at rest. The nation is not dissevered, but united. One flag floats proudly over us all. The past of bitter hatred is gone. The present of concord is here. The future—large with possibilities for the united nation—lies before us.

The visitor to Gettysburg, as he comes away from the field of battle and gives ears to his imagination, will have no difficulty in hearing a strong, commanding voice—the voice of Prophet soon to become Martyr—saying to the assembled multitude, and also to the invisible host of the coming generations of the Republic:

"It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

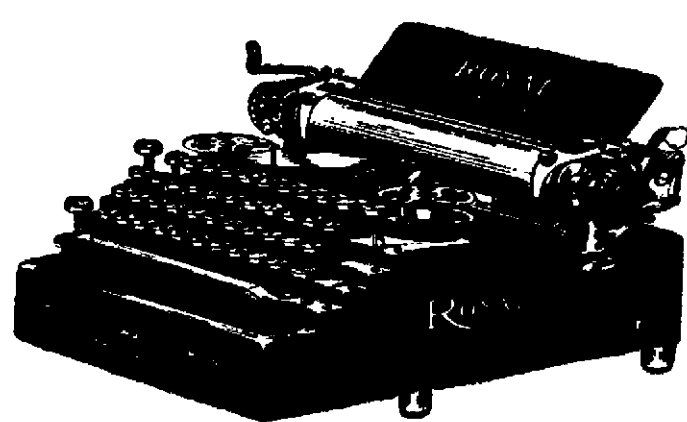

Sunday School Institute.

Second District S. S. Association held institute in the M. E. Church of Orrtanna Friday afternoon and evening, May 26. The meeting was opened by music and Rev. J. J. Hill conducted the devotional exercises, after which Rev. Stonebraker of Fairfield welcomed the people to the convention, after which there was the report of the district officers.

Rev. Stonebraker and Rev. Hill then spoke on "The Home Department." "The S. S. a Community Asset," was very nicely discussed by Rev. Hill and he also spoke at this time of Adams county keeping in line of the State Association. This was followed by music. "The Teacher Teaching" was then taken up by Mr. Winthrope and Rev. Forrest, both emphasizing the importance of training and thorough preparation. Mr. Bair then gave a short talk on the "Good of S. S. Conventions." The evening session opened with song services and prayer by Mr. Winthrope. This was followed by a solo by Rev. Forrest. "How to Save the Boys" was then taken up by Rev. Hill in the absence of Rev. Fleck. Speaking of placing the boys in good environments and parents themselves living a worthy life to imitate. Mr. Winthrope at this time spoke on the cradle roll department and the value and benefits derived therefrom. Rev. Stonebraker then spoke on "The Keeping of the Sabbath," giving many reasons and benefits for the observing of same. In the absence of Rev. Datzell Rev. Koser very plainly and forcibly showed us "The Parent's Obligation to the Sunday School." The convention was interesting as well as instructive and inspiring. The convention closed by singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," and the benediction by Rev. Stonebraker.

County Committee Meeting.

The Democratic County Committee will meet at the Globe Hotel, Gettysburg, on Saturday, June 10, at 10:30 a. m., for the purpose of electing a chairman, Secretary and Treasurer and to transact such other business as may come before it.

S. MILEY MILLER,
County Chairman.

DEMOCRATIC MEETINGS.

The meeting of the Democratic County Committee next Saturday is a very important meeting and there should be a full turnout. The Democrats of the county should see to it that Adams county is well represented in numbers at the big Democratic meeting in Harrisburg on June 15. Governor Woodrow Wilson and Speaker Champ Clark will speak at the meeting.

COMMENDABLE RECORDS.

Adams county people can review the records of Senator Wm. A. Martin and Representative James C. Cole in the last legislature with great pride and commendation. They were always to be found in attendance when their respective houses were in session and faithfully representing their constituents and doing their utmost to serve their people in every way in their power.

The great fight of Adams county representatives was in securing the passage of the Sprout bill in the shape it stood on final passage. Adams county was specially favored in the making of this bill, seven state roads being provided to the county seat. There was one route that gave them particular trouble and that was the Bendersville road and whether it should go by the Idaville route to Mt. Holly or by the Alta route. The people of that section became greatly interested in this question. Petitions were signed by over 500 citizens for the Idaville route, all but twelve citizens of Bendersville signed for this route and the petition for the Alta route was signed by about 100 people. The facts as presented to the legislature showed that 137 people lived on the Idaville route and but 22 on the Alta route. J. D. Swope, Esq., represented the Alta route and Senator Martin and Representative Cole were repeatedly given to understand that in supporting the Idaville route they had the Swope to fight, but they continued to work for the road that would benefit the greatest number. Mr. Cole was fortunate in securing the conference committee in his liking and that helped to win the day.

Representative Cole was not mentioned by the "North American" in the final vote on the Kline liquor bill. This does an injustice to Mr. Cole for he helped to kill this bill, one of the most iniquitous bills that the machine tried to put through the legislature. The house had amended the bill so as to be distasteful to the liquor interests and after conference the House was asked to withdraw the amendments, and Mr. Cole's vote was recorded against withdrawing the amendments and the bill being then in a shape unsatisfactory to those who wanted it, it was dropped.

Mr. Cole's vote is recorded against that disgusting divorce legislation passed for the special benefit of Millionaire Mellon of Pittsburg, by which he could escape a jury trial. Only one vote was recorded against it and that was Mr. Cole and it was sought to intimidate him for his name was called three times but each time Mr. Cole sang out a determined "No."

Senator Martin and Representative Cole secured the bill to reimburse R. E. Wible, Esq., of this place for $246 paid out erroneously when escheator of the Marshall estate. The State discovered when matter was closed that they had more title than had been disclosed in paying out the proceeds, resulting in the State having $246 of Mr. Wible's money. This money is now restored.

Our representatives are recorded against all the machine salary raisers, and the machine put through a lot of them, not only raising judges' salaries, but salaries of state officials at Harrisburg, but it was done without the help of Adams county representatives. Mr. Cole, however supported the bill to increase the salary of representatives and senators from $1500 to $2400. The bill does not go into effect at the present time and Mr. Cole believes the state should pay a salary that would give the representative something for his service, and at the old figure it appeared that car fare and expenses of living in Harrisburg the five months the legislature is in session left nothing for the work of the representative.

Both Senator Martin and Representative Cole voted against the School Code, because school boards in their district passed resolutions asking them so to do and they had no such requests to vote for it and because the Convention of School Directors of this county voted against the code at their February meeting. They felt they were representing their constituents in so recording their votes. Those in favor of the code recognizing that our representatives were rightly controlled by the expressed desires of their constituents.

Altogether the record of Adams county representatives is one to be approved of and to be proud of.

HORRIBLE AUTO ACCIDENT

A NATIVE OF THE COUNTY INSTANTLY KILLED.

Auto Goes Over Viaduct and Falls Upon Occupants—Other Deaths in the County.

CHARLES A. SEFTON, a native of Fairfield, was one of an auto party of four who plunged to their death off the Mulberry street viaduct in Harrisburg last Thursday evening. The automobile was turned to avoid another machine and bumped into a solid concrete standard. The rails and concrete post which looked as if they could resist the force of a battering ram shivered like a bundle of toothpicks, and the machine went over into the depths below, falling on almost solid concrete left by the builders of the bridge, and turning turtle fell upon the occupants, three meeting instant death and the fourth dying later in the Harrisburg Hospital. Charles A. Sefton was 49 years old, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sefton of Fairfield. He had been living in Harrisburg for the past 10 years being engaged in the carriage business, owner of the Sefton Carriage Works. Before moving to Harrisburg he had been engaged in the same business with his father-in-law at Newport, Pa. Mr. Sefton was driving the car at the time and had had much experience with machines, and was inventor of the mica wind shield extensively used now. Defective construction of the guard rails and concrete post, not being reinforced, is considered the responsible cause for the tragedy. The other victims were Wm. R. Harrar, a director of the Commercial Bank, Mrs. Ethel Dunlap of Harrisburg, and Miss Laura M. Neilson of New Bloomfield. The men were riding in the front seat, the women behind. Mr. Sefton was survived by a wife, and five sisters, Miss Nan Sefton of this place, Mrs. Lillie Knox of Knoxlyn, Mrs. Flora Reading of Vineland, N. J., Miss Belle Sefton of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Jessie Dunkle of Harrisburg. He was a nephew of Joseph Sefton of this place. The funeral was held on Monday, services being conducted in Harrisburg and interment made in the Newport Cemetery.

PAUL RICKRODE, a well known and respected citizen of Reading township, died at his home in Hampton on Saturday evening, May 27, after a lingering illness of over a year, aged 62 years and 7 days. He is survived by his widow and two sons, K. William of Hampton, and Charles of Tyrone township. The funeral was held on Tuesday of last week with services in the Hampton Reformed Church, interment in the adjoining cemetery. His pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Miller, conducted the services.

MRS. CATHERINE MILLER, widow of the late Charles Miller, died at her home in Dillsburg on Sunday afternoon, May 28, aged 90 years, 5 months and 23 days. Mrs. Miller was the oldest resident of Dillsburg. She was a most highly esteemed old lady and was a member of the German Reformed Church since girlhood. The cause of her death was a stroke, which she received about a week before her death. She is survived by three sons, C. Milton of York, Harry and Daniel K. Miller, proprietor of the Dauphin Hotel, Harrisburg, former proprietors of the Hotel Gettysburg in this place, and two daughters, Mrs. George Strayer of Bernadette, this county and at home. The funeral was held on last Wednesday morning, the services were conducted by Rev. W. A. Dickson of Chambersburg, who was selected by Mrs. Miller by reason of the close friendship which existed between the family and Mr. Dickson while he resided in Dillsburg.

MRS. DANIEL HOEFERT died at her home in Littleton township on Monday, May 22, aged 63 years, 9 months and 25 days. The deceased is survived by her husband and two sons, Geo. of Churchtown and Charles at home. The funeral took place on Thursday following with interment at the Littleton Meeting House, Rev. Charles Baker officiating.

MRS. MARGARET MEHRING, wife of John Mehring of Littleton, died suddenly last Thursday, June 1, of hemorrhages. She was aged about 50 years. Mrs. Mehring was a daughter of the late Jacob B. Wildasin and wife of Pennville, York county, and was twice married. Her first husband, to whom she was married about 30 years ago, was Calvin Sheely of Littleton, who died 12 years ago. New Railroad to be Rushed.

S. S. Johnston of Middletown, Dauphin county, who has the contract for the building of the new Conewago and Southern railroad from Biglerville to Cashtown, has been ordered to rush the work to completion as rapidly as possible and will begin work on July 1. The territory to be drained by the Conewago and Southern railroad is one of the largest apple districts in the State of Pennsylvania and hundreds of carloads of fruit are shipped from that section every season. These shipments are now made by wagon to Biglerville and other nearby points, where they are loaded on the line of the Philadelphia and Reading railway.

It is the intention of the promoters of the new road to develop the territory so that when the apple season is over, there will be other kinds of industry that will make freight traffic. A development company will be formed within the near future and an effort made to get new industries to locate therein.

Visits Birthplace.

Dr. A. C. Hummelbaugh, dentist, of Los Angeles, Cal., with his wife and sister, were visitors to Gettysburg last week. Dr. Hummelbaugh is a native of the county, having been born near Idaville and left the county when five years of age. One of the places visited was the old homestead near Idaville and a number of pictures were taken to carry back to his father, Rev. H. A. Hummelbaugh. Dr. Hummelbaugh lived in Iowa, and Salt Lake City before making his home at Los Angeles and it was his first trip east. He is a nephew of Wilson Hummelbaugh of Iron Springs.

How His Old Father and Mother Stood by Their Son Even to Giving Up the Farm

By F. A. MITCHEL

They say that doctors and energy-men see more of humanity as it is than any other class of men, but I question if the endless panorama of incidents typifying the different phases of human life is witnessed by any class that every day passes before bankers. Sometimes whole stories are enacted before us spread over a term of years. I am the repository of one such story that I watched from its beginning to its climax.

One afternoon a weather beaten old farmer with silky white hair scattered over his head came to my desk and, pulling out a wallet, asked for a draft on Denver for $200 in favor of Thomas Williams. He counted out the money, and then, having nothing to do while the draft was being prepared, began to tell me the beginning of this story.

"I'm sendin' the money," he said, "to my boy out in Colorado. He went out there a year ago, takin' some money with him that I give him, but he hasn't had much luck, and it's all gone. First he got sick; then when he got well he went prospectin' and struck somepin that looked good, but some other fellers jumped his claim, whatever that means, and took it all away from him.

"Then Tom got sick ag'in and went to a horsepittle and stayed there three months. Now he's got out of the horsepittle and lookin' about for somepin. I'm sendin' this money to give him a chance. Tom's his mother's pet, and she lays awake nights worritin' about him. I'm mighty fond of the boy myself somehow. He was always a smart little chap—took lots of prizes and things at school.

"When he got old enough to work I wanted him to help me on the farm. He tried it for awhile, but I see purty quick he didn't take to it. He was too smart to be contented to follow a plow same 's his father, who didn't never get no education. So I says to him one day: 'Tommy, reckon you'd better go to the city and work that a-way. This don't suit you.' He was mighty well pleased at that. It almost broke ma's heart to part with him, but she knowed it was better for him and let him go.

"Tom didn't like it in town so well as he thought he would. Leastways he didn't stay long in the place he went into. They must 'a' thought a heap of him, though, for they raised his salary twice, so he wrote me. But he got into a fight with one of the head clerks and got himself discharged. He said the head clerk accused him of stealin' some money.

"Tom was ails an ambitious little chap, and after leavin' his place he concluded he'd go west and try and do somepin big, for ma and me agin we got too old to work. So we scraped up $500 and give it to him, and he—"

At this moment a clerk laid the farmer's draft on my desk, and the first chapter of his story was finished, for he began to count over his soiled and torn bills, now and again wetting his thumb on his lip as he turned them up. Then, leaving them to me and carefully folding his draft, he put it in his wallet, crumpled the wallet down into the bottom of his pocket and with a "Goodby, Mr. Cashier," left the bank.

The second chapter of the story is very short. There is hardly enough in it to make a chapter, but there is a good deal beneath the few words required to tell it. A girl of eighteen came to the bank, laid down $24, nearly all in silver coin, and asked for a draft to cover the amount.

"To whom will you have it made payable?" I asked.

"Tom Williams," in a soft voice, almost a whisper.

I ordered the draft made out, and the girl stood waiting. Unlike the farmer, she didn't tell all I would have liked to know, so I asked:

"Is Tom Williams your brother?"

"No," she replied, looking down on the floor.

I had not liked the indications as to Tom's character as they appeared in his father's account of him, and now that money was going to him from his sweetheart I began to despise him. I handed the girl the draft and had a good opportunity to study her, for she never once looked up at me. She went out with it hugged up against her heart, as though she loved it because she had saved it for Tom.

My next visitor in behalf of Tom was his mother. She stood by my desk emptying on it from a carpetbag a lot of bills and silver and copper coins. Not knowing who she was, I asked what I should do with the money, and she said, "Send it to Tom." By this time I was not likely to forget Tom and asked if she wished a draft for Thomas Williams. She said she did. I turned her funds over to a clerk to count, and he reported that they amounted to $643.47. I ordered the draft to be made out, placed a chair before the old lady and said, with a view to my enlightenment:

"Mr. Williams pretty busy nowadays?"

"No, pa ain't busy. He's sick. I wish we had our boy here to help us. He's out in Colorado prospectin'. He says he's struck a mine or a goin' to strike a mine or somepin and wants some money for grub stakin' or somepin like that. We're sendin' him all we kin jest now, but hope to send him some more time by. We had some money saved up for old age, but we've been a-drawin' on it for Tom, and this is all there is left."

When she went out with her draft I found myself boiling with indignation at this worthless scamp, who was sucking the lifeblood out of his old father and mother—even his sweetheart.

There was a visit from the sweetheart after this to ask for a draft of $18.50, which convinced me that Tom had accepted the first amount she had sent him. Then one day the old farmer came in pale and trembling, evidently just out of a sickbed, with the check of a mortgage company for $1,000. He asked for a draft in exchange for it payable to this vampire of a son. We bankers make it a rule to mind our own business, but I had reached a point where I could no longer refrain from warning this poor old man.

"So you have mortgaged your farm to send money to your son?" I said.

"Yes; Tom's in powerful need of money. The mine he thought was goin' to turn out so fine petered out. He says it closed up as he went down instead of openin'."

"And you lost all the money you sent him for the development?"

"Yes, we lost it," replied the old man with a tremulous voice.

"Aren't you afraid you'll lose this too?"

"I dunno. Tom's got another mine. He says he's sure o' this."

"Of course it's a business of mine, but I don't like to see you, an old man, mortgaging your farm to send money to a son who should be giving you money instead of you giving it to him. Suppose you can't pay the interest on the mortgage when it is due. You will lose your farm."

The old man stood wiping his face with a handanna handkerchief, the picture of misery.

"I know what yer mean," he said, "but ma she won't keep back anything the boy wants. She never did. I always told her she'd spoil him."

"I'm afraid she has spoiled him. You should know that your son is not wasting your money at gambling or something like that and telling you that he's on the verge of making a fortune in a mine before risking any more money on him."

"That's what I tell ma."

At this moment the draft was laid before me, but instead of handing it to him I said:

"Hadin' you better think this over?"

He stood, his eyes fixed on vacancy, slowly swaying or tottering, and I knew there was a great contest going on in his mind. His love for his boy conquered.

"I'm bliged to you, Mr. Cashier, and mebbe you're right, but I allus believed in my Tom, and I can't go back on him now."

I handed him the draft, and he scuffed slowly out of the bank.

The old man must have borrowed all he could on his farm, considering the transaction as a sale, for he failed to pay the first interest that fell due on the mortgage. I knew this, because I saw in a newspaper a legal notice of foreclosure proceedings on his farm.

"Well," I sighed, laying down the paper, "the old man has given his home to his reprobate son; he has nothing more to give. I shall not suffer again at seeing him come into the bank to do what I can't prevent his doing."

The same day I met the young girl on the street whom I was sure was Tom's sweetheart. I stopped her and asked:

"Is Farmer Williams turned out of house and home?"

"Not yet, sir."

"But he will be?"

"I suppose so."

"Has his son sent him anything to help him?"

"No, sir. He wrote to say that he was awful sorry to see the farm go, but he could not help it."

"H'm. Do you think a son who will treat his father and mother like that would treat a wife any better?"

Tears came into her eyes. I was ashamed at giving her this useless pain. I walked on.

About a month after this a strapping young fellow with a fine, manly face came into the bank and said he wished to open an account. I assented, and he made a deposit of $49,506.

"Will you please leave your signature in this book?" I said. He took up a pen and wrote:

"Thomas Williams."

"You Tom Williams?" I exclaimed.

"Yes. What do you know about me?"

"Son of Farmer Williams?"

"Yes."

"Sold your mine?"

"Yes; I've sold a mine in Colorado, or two-thirds of it. This money I'm leaving with you is the first cash payment; there are two others of $50,000 each."

"Has your father's farm gone to the mortgagee?"

"No; I'm in time for that. I was afraid I wouldn't be, though. Anyway, I'd have bought it back. If it hadn't been for the money father sent me I couldn't have carried the deal through. I expected the farm to go for the mine."

"And the young girl to whom we gave drafts payable to your order?"

He colored and said: "It's in with the rest, but she and I'll be one anyway. I shall transfer two-thirds of this deposit to father. I took him and mother in for thirds."

I went to see the old farmer and his wife and found them jubilant. "I told you I had confidence in my boy," the farmer said. "He was always straight."

I attended Tom Williams' wedding and kissed the bride. I couldn't help it.

Arrested as Pickpockets.

Sheriff Fissel has in his custody three young men arrested on Memorial Day, charged with being pickpockets. The prisoners had a hearing before Justice Hill last week who held them for trial at the August Court. The prisoners gave their names as Joseph Horn, Harry Bradford and Eli Caplin. A Baltimore detective names them Harry Plymouth, Joseph Moran and Eli Caplin, and that the first two had served terms and last named had been arrested a number of times.

At the hearing J. A. Johnston, of Wilmington, Del. testified that his purse was taken from him on a trolley car and he gave chase to Plymouth, alias Horn who dropped the purse as he ran, and it was recovered by Mr. Johnston. This man was caught by Clifford Wireman.

Frank Smith of Baltimore testified to losing his purse containing $1 and a railroad ticket as he was leaving train and caught hold of Caplin, but purse had been passed on.

Jacob Eremam of Baltimore testified to losing his purse with $4.50 and two tickets at the W. M. R. R. depot in this place. That he felt some one at his coat and that the only person near enough to have touched him was Moran, and he said Plymouth, Moran and Caplin were traveling together that day. At hearing District Attorney S. S. Neely conducted the case for the Commonwealth, Hon. D. P. McPherson representing Moran and E. A. Weaver, Esq., Plymouth and Caplin.

Robbins Circus Here June 19.

Gettysburg people are soon to have a chance to see a circus, for the Frank A. Robbins Show will be here on Monday, June 19, giving two performances and a street parade. The latter will start from the show grounds promptly at ten o'clock in the morning. Mr. Robbins comes here this year with a show which is practically new, although some of the best features of last years performance have been retained.

The show has about one hundred performers, three bands, a big group of clever clowns, and a number of educated animals. There is a fine menagerie, and the latter is one of the largest carried by any show on the road, aside from the big three ring aggregations. Mr. Robbins has been running his circus for thirty-one years, which he considers his best recommendation.

He has shown a number of times in Gettysburg and always draws a big crowd for his show is a good one. The Hocom family are the headliners, and they have some fine riding acts, one being a double carrying attraction that has no equal in any of the shows now on the road, Jimmie Burns, a wire walker, who does his work in conventional evening dress, and rides a bicycle, walks on stilts, slides along in a sugar barrel and in other ways surprises the audiences, will present an act lasting longer than most circus acts. The Herbert brothers, one of whom catches a cannon ball as it is shot from the mouth of the cannon, the Moreys, in a Japanese act; any number of attractive women performers; six trained stallions, imported from abroad, and the famous mules, "Dynamite" and "Arkansas", who show human intelligence in their laugh provoking specialty, are some of the features of the show. Remember the date Monday, June 19th.

BARLOW.

Rev. and Mrs. Stockslager represented the Mt. Joy Sunday School at the convention held at St. John's Church, June 4.

Oliver B. Sharetts lost a valuable horse last week.

Miss Mary Rudisill, who is attending

Shippensburg Normal School, spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in this place.

T. D. Gallagher of Washington, D. C., is spending some time with his two daughters of this place, Mrs. Allen Barnes and Mrs. J. E. Jacobs.

Memorial services were conducted at Mt. Joy Church on Monday evening May 29 at 6 o'clock. The graves of the departed soldiers, 14 in number, who are buried in the cemetery at the church, were strewn with flowers, after which the audience adjourned to the Sunday School room where services were conducted. Rev. P. T. E. Stockslager offered prayer; he also delivered a short address. Jacob Waybright gave a talk on army life. A noticeable feature is the fact that only a few years ago when these services were conducted at Mt. Joy Church quite a number of survivors of the war were present to assist in paying tribute to the memory of their departed comrades, while this year the number was but four.

It has been decided that a new library should be purchased for the Mt. Joy Sunday School.

Communion will be administered at Mt. Joy Church on Sunday morning June 11 at 10 o'clock; preparatory services the Saturday previous at 2 p. m. Children's Day exercises for Treasurers Orphan's Home will be held at Mt. Joy Church on Sunday morning, June 18 at 10 o'clock.

Miss Clara Trostle of Piqua, O., is a guest of Miss Elsie Smith.

Rev. A. O. Stone of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League, spoke in the Mt. Joy Lutheran Church Sunday morning. J. F. S.

BUCHANAN VALLEY.

Decoration Day was observed in Buchanan Valley in St. Ignatius Cemetery by the strewing of flowers and placing of laurel wreaths on the soldiers' graves. All were remembered, those who fought in the war of 1812 as well as those in the Civil War. There was no sound of martial music, or the tread of veterans' feet heard in the silent city of the dead. There was no idle curious crowd, but a faithful few, wives and daughters and sons, sisters and grand children of veterans, with loving hand, prompted by loving hearts placed their tribute of sweet flowers on the graves of their soldier dead, those who offered and risked their lives for their country. Gratitude to those soldiers should prompt every patriotic heart, to be among the number of those who pay tribute at least once a year to the soldier dead. The Star Spangled Banner floats peacefully over their graves, among the beautiful decorations. May they rest in peace. SCS
